Have a Safety Plan:

Prepare an emergency get-away kit for you and your children with: an extra car key and house key, cash, credit card, clothes, bank books, birth certificates, phone numbers of friends and relatives, and medications. Have an escape plan to get to safety quickly. Call 911 if you are in danger or need immediate help. If you must return home, you may request a police escort if you could be in danger.

Getting a Protective Order:

A Judge can write an Order of Protection, ordering the abuser to stay away from you and the children. The Domestic Violence Hotline (410-222-6800) can offer assistance in filling out the paperwork for the protective order. Apply for this in District Court or Circuit Court in the county where the abuse occurred. A Temporary Order will likely be issued on the same day. If you have this order and the abuser comes to home, work or school, you may call 911.
