We've picked a DAISY!

University of Maryland St. Joseph Medical Center is proud to present the DAISY Award to Telemetry Nurse Jeremiah Soko, RN.

transition to a room, given that it was nearing that time of day when the nurses transition shifts...[but] we were blessed with Jeremiah, a calm, cool, collected breath of fresh air who afforded me one of few sighs of relief during a very difficult day. Jeremiah was both responsive and proactive, direct with us and compassionate with my Mom.

Jeremiah was recognized by a patient's family member for his open and soothing manner, his compassionate responsiveness and his dedication to treating others with kindness and dignity.

From patient R. M.:

For the first time, I had witnessed my Mom have two full seizures, and after spending most of the day in the emergency room, I was anticipating a rougher-than-usual

What struck me maybe the most was that he didn't put himself above any aspect of my Mom's care. When she had an accident in her bed and diarrhea in her commode, he just tactfully and efficiently cleaned everything up, my Mom included. He could have easily gone to the tech, even if just for help... Jeremiah was absolutely what we needed to get through the night and feel secure that my Mom was safe.

Thank you, Jeremiah.
