

SOS

Survivors Offering Support

at The Cancer Institute at University of Maryland St. Joseph Medical Center

Facing Breast Cancer?

Discover the Power of Two.

University of Maryland St. Joseph Medical Center's Survivors Offering Support, or SOS, program pairs women who have been diagnosed with breast cancer with trained breast cancer survivor mentors. Mentors offer emotional support and personal insight as no one else can, because they've navigated the journey themselves. This vital support system—embracing the power of two!—can help make the breast cancer journey less confusing and more empowering.

You are not alone. If you're facing breast cancer and could benefit from a mentor's support, or if you're interested in training to become a mentor, SOS is the right match for you...Join us!

To learn more, contact Susan Feild, RN, BSN, CN-BN, at 410-427-5509 or email susanfeild@umm.edu.